Imperial Tobacco

(Ross's view of the job, not Imperial Tobacco's)

- Principle point of contact for all development and technical business needs.
- Opportunity for self paced training during quiet times. This will be funded and supported by the business. Such as MCTS
- Opportunity to attend formal training course.
- As the principle developer you will, guide and support the business in choosing the appropriate technical solutions.
- Imperial is a large and bureaucratic company that doesn't change quickly. This means that "radical concepts" such as Agile and Open Source are not perceived in the same light as the development community.
- You are NOT working for a software house, but a very small (although important) role within a company which uses IT solutions as a means for increasing profit .
- Good company to work for - Pension / Car Park / Pizza / Bonus (Up to 16.7% - last year was 11% ish)
- Furniture application is ASP.Net / VB.Net / MVP / SubSonic / SQL 2005 / SSIS
- Role would suit a Junior developer who has a general level of .Net competence or a mid level developer that would like to get experience working in the front line of a business facing role.
